The result is that every low and then the law confirms a justice. The hjustice is particularly unpleasant when it is of the kind that cannot fail on every citizen allike but only on some: that is to say, when it is inscriminatory. The law tiself is not discriminatory, of course: the discrimination occurs in its application by those in a position to use it.

It is like this. Through no fault of his own, none whatever, but through exigency created by arbitrary authority, a man was prevented from working his land. He was not allowed to work it. That was in 1962 In July 1963 the Official Gazette hore a notice to the effect that certain lands not in the working possession of their original owners on April 1, 1952 were, or would be, "required" for purposes of easential development Authority. In the case in question it was not a matter of security.

THE man did not want to give I up. It had not been his fault but the fault of Authority that he had not been working the land on April 1952. And now he wanted his land as any man wants his own land, the earth he has run through his fingers and that ran through his fingers as like as not: any man wants his own land, it is the kind of want that makes men go to war to keep enemies out of their country, who might take away their land. So this man went to law. His case was brought before the Supreme Court sitting as a High Court of Justice, but what could the learned Judges do but interpret the law as it is written, which dispossesses the man of the land he used to work when he could the law as it is written, which dispossesses the man of the land he used to work when he could and leaves it to the men who took it from him because he was not working it on April 1, 1962, at which time Authority, acting within the rights given it by the Government that later on gave someone else the right to take the man's land, compelled the poor man to stay at home in his village and forbade him to go out to his land.

NOW, did this happen to an Israeli? Yes, and that happened to an Israeli but the happened to an Israeli but the Israeli as an Arab and although the law sets down so distinction, because that would not look nice, it is pretty obvious that it could not have happened to an Israeli Jew but only to an Israeli Arab and it is no use talking the usual accurity talk because security had nothing to do with the tak-had noth

Commons Defeats Labour on Suez

LONDON, Thursday. — The House of Commons by 271 votes to 219 tonight rejected a Labour Member's motion deploring the Government's handling of the Anglo-Egyptian talks because it had prolonged uncertainty as to the future of the Suez Canal base.

Mrs. Barbara Castle, a supporter of the left-wing Labour leader Mr. Aneurin Bewan, had moved the following motion:

"That this House, noting the deterioration since 1951 in the deterioration since 1951 in the living conditions of our troops in the Canal Zone due to the uncertainty as to the future of the base, deplores the Government's handling of the Anglo-Egyptian negotiations which has prolonged this uncertainty."

Labour, launching its attack on the 1954-55 army programme declared today that British installations in the Suez Canal Zone are a "concentration camp" threatening both the army's well-being and Egypt's stability. The opposition blamed "instability" in Egypt on British forces occupying the Suez Canal.

Mr. John Strachey, former Socialist War Secretary, opened Labour's challenge as spokesman in the debate. Of the Suez Canal dispute be said:

In a royal decree issued on the eve of his departure, King Faisal suspended sessions of both Houses of Parliament for 30 days, ANA reports it is understood this move was taken to enable the new Cabinet to get stabilised and prepare a statement of policy.

The Istanbul correspondent of the Cairo newspaper "Gumburis" said yesterday that, as part of its price for joining the Turco-Pakistani pact, Iraq has also demanded that participation in the pact should not interfere with her obligations to Britain or the Arab League. Iraq has also demanded that Iraqi forces would operate only inside the country and that Israel would under no circumstances be included in such a pact, he wrote (APP, NEABS)

The Cooperative Movement And the Absorption of New Immigrants

The Consumers' Cooperative movement has been active along three lines in the absorption of the new aliya's immigrants:

The acceptance of new members in the existing cooperatives. The enlargement of existing cooperatives by annaxing to them branches opened in immigrants' quarters and new localities. And lastly, the establishment of cooperatives in all Ma'barot localities inhabited by new immigrants.

All this was no easy task! All this was no easy task!

The masses of newcomers scattered all over the country have posed the problem of assuring them regular supplies, independent of unnecessary middlemen and unnecessary costs, and protecting them from the evils of speculation. The Cooperative movement—"Hamashbir Hamericasi" and Consumers' Cooperatives—which for decades have faithfully assisted the farmers and the wage-earner in town and settlement, has already proved its usefulness in war as in peace, in prosperous years as in periods of serious shortages and economic crisis. It has participated in the realization of national and labour ideals of the national institutions and the Histadrut. This was its attitude before the establishment of the State and it has continued to support faithfully and devotedly the economic policy of the Government of Israel.

With the flow of immigration "Hamashbir Hamericasi" and

State and it has continued to support faithfully and devotedly the economic policy of the Government of Israel.

With the flow of immigration "Hamashbir Hamerkasi" and the Consumers' Cooperative Union were required to harness themselves to the task of assuring supplies to immigrants in Ma'barpt, in urban localities and in abandoned villages as well as in new settlements. Without slackening the expansion of the Movement's activities among the old-timers — development which necessitated additional efforts and means — the Movement has fully responded to the requirements of the hour.

"Hamashbir Hamerkasi" and the Consumers' Cooperative Union have made every effort to meet the pressing needs of the New Immigration. The expansion of the Movement in the first years of the State will be worthly recorded in its annals.

the State will be worthily recorded in its annals,

By assuring regularity of supplies, the Movement, which to date comprises some 1,100 centres, has branches all over the country and remains the faithful instrument of immigrant absorption and a substantial prop for the State in its struggle for the stabilisation of our national economy.

stabilization of our national economy.

There is no doubt that the main achievement of the Cooperative Movement since the establishment of the State has been the services rendered in connection with the new Altys. There is no better way than the Cooperative Movement for the economic and social absorption of the newcomers and their speedy education in the principles of mutual assistance — which is the first guarantee of success under our special national conditions created by the Ingathering of the Exiles. But were it not for the development and firm stand acquired by the Cooperative Movement is the course of the past decades, it would have now been of the utmost urgency to open such Cooperative Centres. The Cooperative Movement considers its services in the integration of the newcomers in Israel's life as giving it right to the laurels of achievement.

"Hamashbir Hamerkazi" and the Consumers' Bocieties have also instituted "Hamashbir La'Ole" which is to found new cooperatives in immigrants' settle" ents and nurture them until such time as it will be possible to hand them over to the members of those settlements.

Most of the settlements are affiliated to the Settlement Movement, but there are also among them some which are organized in the Hapoel Hamizrahi, Haoved Hazioni, Poalsi Agudat Tizrael, etc., There are 450 workers employed in the 210 societies within the frame of "Hamashbir La'Ole", and the menthly turnover is about one million Israel pounds.

Mr. Bentsur appeared as witness for the prosecution against Mr. M. Greenwald who had made the charge in a news sheet. Mr. Greenwald is on trial for having libelled Dr. Kastner by accuaing him in the news sheet of having collaborated with the Naus.

The Foreign Ministry, in seeking to implement the cardinal principle of the right of every Jew to settle in Israel, uses diplomatic channels and not public pressure and the creation of hostile motions against any State which places. Unofficially, Dr. Kastner helped the Israel Foreign Ministry by writing a series of moderate articles in the Israel Fress on the question of Jewish emigration from Hungary. These articles were brought to the attention of the Hungarian authorities as evidence that the atmosphere in Israel against Hungary is by no means poisoned, Mr. Bentsur stated.

When he was in Budapest, he said, he had met a number of Social Democrat leaders who had expressed admiration for Dr. Kastner with whom they had worked in the underground.

He denied that Dr. Kastner was regarded in contemporary Hungary as a war eriminal, He cited the fact that recently both he and Dr. Kastner had been invited to dinner by the Hungarian Chargé d'Affaires.

Hungarian immigration has not been negligible, Mr. Bentsur pointed out Between May and November 1948, 3,000 to 3,500 youths from Hungary enrolled in the Israel army. Since then 3,000 more Jews, including Zionist leaders, immigrated on the basis of an agreement with the Hungarian Government.

A glowing tribute to Dr. Kastner's role in organizing the freedom train from the Clui Ghetto to Switzerland was paid in court yesterday by Mr. David Hermann, a lecturer at the Hebrew University, who was on the train.

Mr. Hermann described the extreme nervousness of the passengers and the persistence of rumours among them that they were being led to slaughter instead of being taken to Switzerland. When they drew near to the Swiss frontier, they were panic-stricken, fearing that they would not be permitted to cross Dr. Kastner was on the scene and took charge of the crossing operation.

The League was founded in 1924 and has grown today to 45,000 members. The League's activities can be divided into two ma' channels: prevention and fund-raising. Formerly, the Israel League financed the hospitalization of its cases as well, but this year it was decided to concentrate on preventive work—as is done all over the world—and to let the Government. Kupat Hollm and Malben provide hospitalization, Consequently, the League transferred its two clinies to the Health Ministry.

It is also argued that if the State were now to insist upon these few score of young men serving in the standard and stating in the schools. The latter period is fraught with many problems which could be eliminated with enlightenment, as many persons are prejudiced against employing post-T.B. cases even when there is no longer any danger. Ten per cent of the country's doctors work at the dispensaries on a voluntary, part-time basis. Doctors also head most of the local antituberculosis councils.

The percentage of T.B. here has dropped considerably—almost 60% in the last 3-4 years. This tradition, which I summarized from a lengthy Hebrew text quoted by Rev. R. Shemtob Gaguin, formerly Av Bet Din of the Spanish and Portuguese Jews in England, is firmly established among the Jews o'. Cochin, and in 1772 it was related to Commander Forbes, author of "Oriental Memoir," who lived there for a long time. He accepted the theory that Jewish settlement on the coast of Malabar dated back at least to the time of the destruction of the Second Temple by Titus (70 C.E.).

"They tried to scare us by saying we'd all die of malaria, and Micha, "Nonsense. And we also found an antique jar and some Hebrew coins." I asked him whether I could quote him. "What do I care what they write about us abroad." he said. I asked him how they'd happened to come there. "No-one wanted to have a settlement here," he said, "but since Ein Gedi means something to Israelis, so me paople were found who agreed to come. It was obviously South who missed the boat, when, after his partner's encouraging three diamonds, he failed to respond with a raise in spades. Whether the partnership plays asking hid or not, such a belated raise can only mean a holding which is not quite sufficient for an immediate support, i.e., the ace and a small spade, or three spades to the knaws. And there is not the least doubt about if that North would gratefully have seized the intimation to the fullest advantage.

North's three diamonds is an understatement, and we would prefer here a two hearts over. I call under any system. But after South's five diamonds, North has little to work on in order to guess whether the slam is on or not; even if he does take the plunge, it will be impossible for the partnership to reach the par bid of six spades. The tablecloth, we decided after much thought, will serve excellently as butterfly wings, when it has been backed by a plastic cloth and stretched out over pleture wire. And for the Snow Queen the lace stole, liberally bespattered with spangles, will do well enough.

IL MORDECHAI: Will wear the same type of cloak, but without the girdle, and cut on much larger, looser lines, Of course, the tunic and the lining to the cloak should be light blue — the cloak itself white.

III. HAMAN:

Haman:

Haman can wear this sort of "cloak-coat" over his shorter tunic; but it should have a nar-rower armhole and generally be cut on narrower lines.

Round his waist he can wear a "kummerbund" belt, a short, aquare, fringed shawl will give his costume a dashing and suthentic note.

diagrams.)

Both Ahaseurus and Haman could have drop gold ear-rings, black, pointed beards reaching to their chests and black mous-taches.

As crepe hair is not generally available, black wool is suitable—or burnt cork, with an abbreviated beard, of course.

Ahaseurus could also carry a long staff tipped with a rough gold knob, the symbol of his authority.

II, MORDECHAI:

Mordechai should wear the typical Hebrew head-dress of the time, very like the Arab head-dress of today, i. e. a kerchief at least 20" square, placed straight over the back of the neck, with the closely fitting than holding it closely in place. IV. ESTHER and VASHTI

In Eastern Europe the Jews were wont to say Kadochie is kein krenk and Purim is no lihiess and Purim is no lihiess and Purim is no loilday). Now here, in the Holy Land, maiaria had become a very serious illness and Purim had become the most wondrous of holidays. Today, no one feels very nestalgic over the malaria which plagued the new settlers who built their colonies on the minamic swamps, but many of us do miss the exciting Purim celebrations which turned Tel Aviv into an enchanting carnival city for days before and after Purim.

Invitation to Drink

The celebration was called Adlayada. The name is taken from the first three words of a Talmudle saying which insists that one must drink on Purim ad lo pada ben area Haman wbaruch Mordeches (until he could not distinguish between cursed Haman and blessed Mordeches). While other Talmudic proscriptions and prescriptions might have fallen by the wayside, Tel Avivians in those good old days threw themselves body and soul into the spirit of Adloyada.

Into the spirit of Adloyada.

The children then, as the children today, were turned into Queen Esthers and Mordechais, beggars and kings, flora and fauna. Today kindly relatives from America add a television touch by sending gifts of costumes representing comic strip characters, heroes of Martian wars and desperados of the Western plains. But in the good old days it was not only the children who went in for fancy dress. Everyone from teen agers to octogenarians planned some sort of costume for one more of the parties which were the order of the day. Who were they to defy a Talmudie injunction? One the people marching down Allenby Road.

It all wound up in a Grand Ball at the Mograbi Theatre. Upstairs, downstairs, hallways and backstage were all decorated by the artists of Tel Aviv. Music was gayer than music had ever sounded before or since. A beauty Queen was picked from an assorted bouquet of lovelies, and she was the most beautiful queen since Esther enticed Ahasurus. There never were such Purim celebrations in all the world. Who knows? Maybe 20 or 25 years from now, when some things have been mercifully blurred by time, people celebrating the Adloyada in Tel Aviv will look back with a sigh for those "good old days" of 1954.

It is pathetic to see how ineffectual many fine novelties have become since they decided that Public Enemy Number One is not the Capitalist Octopus but the Communist Spider, Older readers remembering the impact of Silone's "Bread and Wine" and "Fontamara" will be bitterly disappointed by his "Handful of Blackberries" (Harper, IL.4, 375). Rocco and Stella begin happily enough in the Party: comes the dawn and they spend the rest of the book evading its efforts to deal with them as traitors. They succeed.

Americans are likewise pre-occupied with the dangers lurking underneath their beds. In "One" (Vanguard, IL.4, 375) David Karp roams into a Welfare State of the future, and depicts in great detail the efforts of a villainous leader to destroy a man's mind. This has been described by reviewers — incorrectly — as equal to Orwell's 1984, Another writer who sees the future grim and red is Philip Wytie in "Tomorrow" (IL.4, 375).
